

Dear Neighbor,

Last week, Republicans in Congress put politics over parents, proposing another extreme-MAGA law aimed at banning books and suppressing the truth.

As a mother who went to many parent-teacher meetings and a grandmother of two young children, I encourage parental engagement in their children's education.

That's why I was proud to fight back against H.R. 5, a Republican bill that would spread Florida's dangerous policies across the country.

Florida lawmakers are banning books, bullying LGBTQ+ students, and suppressing history. Teachers are threatened with jailtime for putting books about Rosa Parks or the Holocaust in front of their students.

I don't think I have to tell you that this is not what our parents want!

Parents want guns banned from school. They want their children to have well-rounded classes, and teachers to be paid fairly.

Putting people over politics, I voted and spoke against H.R. 5 on the House Floor, and proudly support Rep. Bonamici's Bill of Rights for Students and Parents instead. Our students deserve a well-rounded education and this Resolution — endorsed by numerous organizations including the National Parent Teacher Association — encourages the collaboration between parents and educators that students need, and supports teaching, learning, and family engagement.

You can count on me to always put people over politics.

Sincerely,

Lois Frankel
Member of Congress
