2023 AUGUST NEWSLETTER

COUNTY HIGHLIGHTS

OOR Begins Training County Departments on Resiliency in Capital Construction Projects Reporting

All County construction departments are required to assess and document resiliency and sustainability measures incorporated into County capital construction projects. The Office of Resilience (OOR) worked with County staff to launch a training on how to use an online form to document these resiliency and sustainability measures. OOR worked with the County's Information System Services to develop the online form to make a user-friendly experience and streamline the reporting process. The staff training not only provides a resiliency refresher but is also increasing County collaboration on resiliency and sustainability projects.

OOR Kicks Off Vulnerability Assessment Outreach with Community Workshop in Belle Glade

On July 11, 2023, OOR kicked off community outreach for the Countywide Climate Risk Assessment in the City of Belle Glade. This project will assess threats due to climate change, such as extreme heat, agricultural impacts, wildfires, and extreme flooding events, and develop a preliminary Resilience Action Plan for the community. The County has already initiated efforts to identify and evaluate future climate change impacts on important assets. The purpose of this meeting and upcoming workshops is to explain the project's goals and outcomes and solicit community feedback. This workshop resulted in a productive Q&A session and great feedback about Belle Glade's community assets and climate impacts that will be incorporated into project planning. To watch a recording of this workshop, click HERE.

OOR Welcomes New Intern: Arielle Perry

OOR would like to give a warm welcome to Arielle Perry as its new intern. With a background in climate and environmental justice, environmental management, sustainability, and biology, Arielle aspires to bring an interdisciplinary perspective from both her experience in the natural sciences and social sciences to assist with the sustainability and climate initiatives of OOR.

Arielle is currently completing her B.S. in Environmental Science at the Harriet L. Wilkes Honors College of Florida Atlantic University, with her senior thesis focusing on cruise line sustainability policies. She previously served as an environmental management intern for Palm Beach County Parks and Recreation and is a biology tutor for her university.

NOAA and Partners Race to Rescue Remaining Florida Corals from Historic Ocean Heat Wave

In response to the record-breaking global heat wave starting in mid-July 2023, heat-stressed corals in the southern Florida Keys have begun to undergo a process called "bleaching," which often leads to death of the corals. To safeguard the area's remaining live and nursery corals, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) has partnered with state agency, university, and non-profit partners to relocate thousands of nursery coral colonies to rehabilitation tanks at the Florida Institute of Oceanography's Keys Marine Lab. To read more about coral bleaching and NOAA's efforts, click HERE.

New Energy Efficiency Standards for Lightbulbs: What You Need To Know

On April 26, 2022, the Biden Administration adopted new regulations for light-bulbs, including a revised definition of a light bulb and a minimum energy-efficiency standard of 45 lumens per watt. This effectively bans the sale of common incandescent light bulbs, since they fail to meet the new standard, which and went into effect August 1, 2023. These new rules are expected to help American consumers save approximately $3 billion on annual utility bills and cut carbon emissions by 222 million metric tons. # President Biden Announces New Actions to Protect Workers and Communities from Extreme Heat

On July 27, 2023, President Joe Biden asked the Department of Labor to issue a Hazard Alert for heat. The Administration also announced that the Department of Labor will enhance the enforcement of heat-safety violations, in an effort to protect workers from heat-related incidents caused by extreme temperatures.
